Meeting on Navy base set

The first meeting of an environmental advisory board for the Memphis Navy base will be at 7 tonight at Millington City Hall.

The Restoration Advisory Board is open to the public, and all interested citizens are encouraged to attend.

The board is one of two new panels established to help Memphis Naval Air Station at Millington identify and clean up any contamination before parts of the base are turned over to the community or other federal or state agencies. The other is the Base Realignment and Closure Clean-up Team.

The two groups will help speed up the disposal and re-use of Memphis NAS property.
